PREFACE

THE MONTH,[1] the contents of which are now for the first time indexed, began to be published in July, 1864, under the editorship and ownership of Miss Frances Taylor, afterwards better known as the foundress of the Institute of "Poor Servants of the Mother of God." The periodical was designed to fill the gap which then existed in Catholic journalism, between our only quarterly, The Dublin Review, and the various weekly newspapers. The Jesuit Fathers of Farm Street had a good deal to do with its inception, and after a year's existence, it passed entirely into their hands, Father Henry Coleridge becoming Editor. He held office until the beginning of 1882, when he was succeeded by Father Richard Clarke. At the beginning of 1894, Father Clarke resigned the editorship into the hands of Father John Gerard, who has retained it ever since, with the exception of the period of his Provincialate, 1897—1900, during which the publication was conducted by Father Sydney Smith.

During this period of forty-five years, THE MONTH itself has undergone several changes, in price and size, in shape and in the character of its contents. It began as a demy-octavo, a format which it retained till the end of 1873, when it assumed its present royal-octavo shape. During its first year also, each issue (except, indeed, the first) contained a full-page wood-engraving from the already skilled pencil of Mr. Walter Crane. Originally costing a shilling, its price rose to 2s. 6d. when, in 1871, it began to be issued in double numbers as a bi-monthly; an experiment which, although lasting only three years, has not been without inconvenience in the compiling of the Index. In 1874, it was enlarged in all dimensions, the price remaining the same, and until 1897, it formed three volumes yearly instead of two. In the latter year, with a slight diminution in the number of pages, the price was restored to the original shilling, at which it still remains.

In character of contents the changes have not been so marked. There was a good deal of fiction in the earlier years and sometimes several serial stories were running at the same time. Poetry also, some of a very high standard, from contributors such as J. H. Newman, Aubrey de Vere, and Denis Florence McCarthy, was a regular feature until comparatively lately. But from the first the aim of THE MONTH has consistently been to bring Christian principles to bear upon all the problems of political and social life, to appraise the advances of science at their true value, and to present the various episodes of human history, actual and past, as they impress believers in Providence and in the Church. It is in the conviction that many useful contributions of this nature to Christian thought and Catholic apologetic are to be found buried in its back numbers, that the present Index to THE MONTH has been compiled. It affords some indication of the advance of Catholic ideals in England during the past half-century, while showing the recurrent nature of certain controversies; it gives access to details of past history which may be useful in forecasting the future, and, in its measure, we trust it will serve the cause of Truth.

[1] For fuller details of its history see A Century and a Retrospect, by Father John Gerard, an article published in December, 1902, at the close of the hundredth volume.

A few words as to the scope and arrangement of the Index may be serviceable. It goes down only to the end of 1908, but it may be kept up to date by the use of copies interleaved for further entries. Year, Month and Page are generally given, but in a long series of articles the pagination is sometimes omitted. In the Subjects section no attempt has been made to extract and tabulate the salient points of each separate article—a process which, to say nothing of the labour involved, would have increased the bulk of the volume twenty-fold and rendered the price of production quite prohibitive. For the same reason book-reviews, although often containing valuable matter, have had to be left out. At the same time where the title of an article gives no definite idea of its subject some more descriptive heading has generally been substituted. Again, stories and poems, as not being likely objects of search, are indexed only under their authors, in which section the arrangement is chronological. Considerations of space, too, have led to the year being printed only once, in clarendon type, and thus each month and page should always be referred to the next preceding year. Similarly, shorter articles, such as those under the headings "Notes on the Press," and "Flotsam and Jetsam," have not been ascribed to their authors. It is to be regretted that, owing to records having been lost or not having been kept, the authorship of a number of earlier articles, anonymous or initialled only, has not been discovered. Any corrections or additions which may help to make a future edition, if called for, more complete and accurate, will be gratefully received.

The Editor takes this opportunity of expressing his thanks to a lady who kindly undertook the heavy labour of compiling the first draft of the Index, and who, with a modesty as marked as her industry, does not wish her name to be disclosed.
